

Jane Pucher

Jane Pucher is a staff attorney at the Innocence Project and she litigates post-conviction DNA cases throughout the country. She is also an Adjunct Professor at Cardozo Law School where she supervises students through the Innocence Project Clinic. Prior to joining The Innocence Project, Jane worked for five years as a public defender with The Bronx Defenders, representing hundreds of individuals charged with misdemeanor and felony crimes from arraignment through trial. She also served as a supervising attorney, training newer attorneys who were just beginning to represent clients charged with felonies, and mentoring them in all areas of practice. Jane graduated from Georgetown University Law Center in 2011, where she was a student attorney in the Criminal Justice Clinic, and where she volunteered at the Mid-Atlantic Innocence Project, at the Northern Virginia Capital Defender Office, at the Public Defender Service of D.C, and at the Southern Center for Human Rights. She graduated from Columbia University with a B.A. in Political Science in 2008.
