

Peter Jarvis

Head of Environmental Liability, AIG Europe Limited

Peter currently services as Head of Environmental Liability Insurance with responsibility for Europe, Middle East and Africa. In his role he has overall responsibility for the Environmental Insurance product solutions that are designed and delivered to clients and this includes ensuring products advance with emerging claims trends and environmental legislation. Environmental Insurance within AIG works with a wide range of clients from domestic SME to major multinational and, within his role, he works alongside claims and risk engineering to help minimise the risk of an event and ensure the correct services are in place when an event occurs. Peter has worked for AIG for 9 years, progressing into his current role from underwriting Environmental Insurance for the UK market.

Peter also is currently Chairman of the Non Marine Environmental Committee of the International Underwriting Association. The committee focuses on advancing the understanding of Environmental insurance within the broking and client arena and discussing legislation proposals and changes with European member state regulators or within the European Commission.

Prior to joining AIG, Peter worked as an Environmental Consultant within the private sector for 5 years. Specialising in contaminated land investigation and remediation, Peter worked with a broad sector of clients from private developers to Government Agencies including the military.

Peter holds a BSc in Geography and an MSc in Environmental Analysis & Assessment from the University of London.
