Duane Morris LLP
San Francisco, California

Michael L. Fox is a partner with Duane Morris LLP in San Francisco. He represents energy companies, chemical and equipment manufacturers, construction companies and public entities in toxic tort, environmental release, general liability and serious personal injury matters. He has extensive experience litigating complex, multiparty disputes involving alleged exposure to asbestos, chemicals and other airborne and groundwater contaminants.

Michael has tried and arbitrated several cases to verdict, and he has argued numerous appeals before the California Supreme Court, California Courts of Appeal and Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, including disputes involving public access, premises liability, civil procedure, silica exposure, California's anti-SLAPP statute, and police officer privacy rights. He frequently publishes articles and speaks regarding toxic exposure claims and mass torts, including most recently "Tenth Circuit Daubert Ruling Bars Plaintiff Expert's AML Benzene Opinion Based on Differential Diagnosis," IADC Toxic and Hazardous Substances Litigation Committee Newsletter (May 2018, and webinar in January 2019).

Michael currently represents a leading North American energy producer in the climate change nuisance litigation.
