

Deborah St. Lawrence Thompson

Deborah St. Lawrence Thompson is a partner in the Baltimore office of Nelson Mullins Riley & Scarborough LLP where she represents a broad array of clients in complex cases in jurisdictions around the country, primarily in the areas of commercial litigation, mass tort litigation, products liability, toxic torts, labor and employment law. Ms. Thompson also coordinates commercial and products liability litigation outside the United States. Ms. Thompson represents public sector employers in both traditional labor and employment law matters. She has earned a reputation among her peers as a tough litigator who carefully prepares each case with a common sense, efficient, practical focus to meet client needs and goals. She provides key leadership and coordination to ensure firm's national clients receive optimal, efficient and coordinated legal services. In 2017, Ms. Thompson served on the faculty of the IADC Trial Academy.
